TESTIMONIALS

"The ANME is an excellent resource for all educators and their students and those interested in the history of Australian education."

Dr Christine Trimmingham Jack
Foundation Chair, ANME Board of Management

"People forget that there is value in things from the past and that value may influence the future"

Berwyn Clayton
Director, Work-based Education Research
Centre, Victoria University

"The power of the ANME lies in its value for heritage, for people and for community. Without it a large part of the history of childhood will disappear"

Emeritus Professor Noeline Kyle

PROVIDING AN HISTORICAL PERSPECTIVE ON EDUCATION

The Australian National Museum of Education (ANME) was founded to promote an understanding of the history of Australian education through the development and preservation of its collection, through support for related research and scholarship and through collaboration with school museums and communities across the nation. It comprises both an on-site repository at the University of Canberra and a distributed national collection, which aims to bring together virtually, archival material held in schools and school museums throughout Australia. The following strands have been adopted to enable thematic interpretation of items, to document trends in Australia's educational history:

- Policy
- Administration
- Curriculum
- Practice
- Innovation

TESTIMONIALS

"I am honoured to be a Patron of the ANME, as my husband was an educationalist with ideas and an historian at heart. He would have welcomed such a museum as this, that brings both education and history together." Lady Darling - 2001

"The conservation of material evidence of educational processes, institutions and personnel is important if we are to understand how and why we received education during the most formative years of our lives."

Emeritus Professor Colin Pearson AO MBE
The Donald Horne Institute for Cultural Heritage,
University of Canberra

"We are losing many valuable lessons from the past"
Emeritus Professor Phillip Hughes AO
Inaugural Phillip Hughes Oration - 2003
